Sunday, the 1st day of December,

1889, was rendered memorable in the sacred history of Joppa, the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage preaching there to a com-pany of Christian people of various de-nominations on "The Birthplace of Sewing Societies." He took for his text cts ix, 39: "And all the widows stood by him weeping, and showing the coats she was with them." The preacher said:

Christians of Joppa! Impressed as I am with your mosque, the first I ever saw, and stirred as I am with the fact that your harbor once floated the great

The disasters to your town when Judas Macmus set it on fire, and Napoleon had five hundred prisoners massacred in your neighborhood, cannot make me orget that one of the most magnificent charities of the centuries was started in this seaport by Dorcas, a woman with her needle embroidering her name inbly into the beneficence of the world. I see her sitting in yonder home. In the doorway, and around about the building, and in the room where she sits, are the pale faces of the poor. She listens to their plaint, she pities their woe, she makes garments for them, she adjusts the manufactured articles to suit the bent form of this invalid woman, and to the cripple that comes crawling on his hands and knees. She gives a coat to this one, she gives sandals to that one. With the gifts she mingles prayers and tears and Christian ent. Then she goes out to e greeted on the street corners by those whom she has blessed, and all through the street the cry is heard: "Dorcas is coming!" Amidst the greatest triumphs in all ages and land, I set down the conquests of the needle, I admit its crimes; I admit its cruelties. It has had more martyrs than the fire; it has punctured the eye; it has pierced the side; it has struck weakness into the lungs; it has sent madness into the lungs; it has sent madness into the brain; it has filled the potter's field; it has pitched whole armies of the suffering into crime and wretchedness and woe. But now that I am talking of Dorcas and her ministries to the poor, I shall speak gally of the obstities of her needle.

The church in Boston belongs to the eastern mission which embraces the New England all their animosities while they bound New York, Eastern Pennup the wounded, and closed the eyes of sylvania, New Jersey, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, with adjacent islands. In many of its articles the "Epitome of the Faith and Doctrines" of the Boston branch, as of the others, is quite similar to the creeds and confessions of faith in the other churches, while in some it differs widely, as follows: Confirma tion, following baptism, is administered by the elders. There will be two resurrections; the first is for "the just", who, with Christ, will inhabit and control the earth for a thousand years. The second will condemn all those who have "knowingly" done evil. The article relating to marriage proves quite conclusively that there is a great difference between the Brighamite faith, as regarded polyg amy, and their own beliefs. It reads We believe that marriage is ordained of God; and that the law of God pro rides for but one companion in wedlock for either man or woman, except in cases when the contract of marriage is
